Regulation

At Temple Academy of Reflexology we believe in upholding the highest standards in both the teaching and practice of Reflexology which is why we have chosen to deliver the Agored Cymru Level 5 Diploma in Practitioner Reflexology. The course is recognised by The Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual) and Qualifications Wales (QW). This qualification is also on the European Qualification Framework which means that employers and education establishments in Europe can easily understand and appreciate the high level to which you have studied. As a regulated qualification, it undergoes quality assurance through internal and external moderation by appropriately qualified and experienced verifiers.

Integrated Reflexology Consortium (IRC)

Temple Academy of Reflexology is honoured to be an Affiliated Training Centre with the Integrated Reflexology Consortium (IRC), a collaboration of the leading reflexology training organisations in England. In 2023 the IRC became the new registered centre for the Agored Cymru Level 5 Diploma in Practitioner Reflexology and thoroughly revised and updated all the content to ensure the course is comprehensive and relevant for today's professional clinical reflexologist.

Association of Reflexologists (AoR)

The AoR was established in 1984 and is a not-for-profit organisation. Today it is the foremost independent professional association for reflexology in the UK. The letters MAR after a practitioner's name denotes their membership status, a sign of assurance that they have met the strictest standards of reflexology practice, are insured to practise and are committed to continually developing their skills and knowledge. All student members receive comprehensive indemnity and public liability insurance which covers them to complete their case studies whilst training and includes business equipment cover for up to £1000. Student membership is for 18 months and has many benefits including access to support materials in the dedicated Members Area on the AoR website.

Gateway Schools

The AoR recognise quality and have one of the highest eligibility criteria for membership in the industry. We are proud to be an AoR Gateway School, demonstrating that we have met the rigorous standards set by the AoR. This means that Temple graduates immediately qualify for AoR Membership. The first three months of full AoR membership is free to Gateway School Graduates.

On Graduation

Upon successfully completing the course, graduates receive a nationally recognised qualification enabling them to gain insurance and practice as a reflexologist working with the general public. Graduates can also apply to register with the Complementary and Natural Healthcare Council (CNHC), which is the UK voluntary regulator for complementary therapy practitioners.

Course Structure

The Agored Cymru Level 5 Diploma in Practitioner Reflexology was revised in 2023 by the Integrated Reflexology Consortium Founder Partners in order to offer the latest cutting-edge information and techniques available to reflexologists. Our course has been carefully designed to encourage creativity, confidence, competency, knowledge and professionalism; empowering graduates to develop successful reflexology businesses in the complementary health industry as it continues to evolve.

Ofqual assigns the Level 5 Diploma in Practitioner Reflexology units under the Skills for Health, Nursing, and Subjects Allied to Medicine sector. Each of the five units is reflexology-specific and has been designed, revised, and updated by experienced reflexologists in collaboration with Agored Cymru.

Level 5 is equivalent to a foundation degree or an HND in England and Wales. In contrast, a Level 3 qualification equates to an 'A' level standard. This qualification has been levelled at Level 5 for the reflexology units and Level 4 for the anatomy, physiology and pathophysiology for reflexology and business planning for reflexologists by the awarding body Agored Cymru.

The Agored Cymru Level 5 Diploma in Practitioner Reflexology consists of five mandatory units.

Reflexology Skills in Practice

This unit introduces your toolkit of hand and foot reflexology techniques and skills. We also cover clinical skills such as communication, ethics, and professionalism in detail. Theories on how reflexology works are discussed and analysed.

Providing Reflexology for Specific Conditions

In this unit, we examine the current research in reflexology and what comprises good research. We explore the use of reflexology in different stages of life, including its application in supporting babies, children and clients experiencing conditions related to the reproductive cycle, such as fertility, maternity, andropause, and menopause. We will also study the stress response, its far-reaching impacts on health, and how to use Adaptive Integrated Reflexology© AIR to support clients; including those in palliative care and with chronic ill health.

Incremental Development of Applied Reflexology Skills in Practice

This unit aims to enhance your skills and techniques in reflexology. You will deliver 100 treatments outside class hours, documenting them as comprehensive case studies with detailed rationale and analysis. The focus is on advancing your proficiency as a practitioner, introducing advanced techniques such as hand reflexology, energy techniques, "Inner Intent" reflexology, and more. Throughout this unit, there is an emphasis on the customisation of treatment plans for individual clients and specific conditions. For the course you will need a minimum of ten clients. You will carry out the 100 treatments in your own home or the client's home. On average you will deliver two treatments a week.

Knowledge of Anatomy, Physiology and Pathology for Reflexology

Studied at level 4, we take a holistic and applied approach to understanding how our bodies are organised and how they work. We focus on stress and its physical and psychological effects on us. We consider how our body will naturally strive to bring itself back into balance and what we can do to encourage this. Assessment is mainly by workbooks and a few essays.

Business Skills for Reflexology Practice

In this module you will write a business plan, choose a name and logo, and draft leaflets and content for a website, as well as set up a cash flow forecast. We cover legal requirements for running your own business so that by the time the course is completed your new reflexology business can be up and running.

Equipment We have included links for guidance only.LaFuma Reclining Chair

RSXA Batyline, Futura Batyline, Evolution Batyline or Futura Air Comfort are all suitable - standard or XL. If we could pick one would be Evolution Batyline as it has a full seat and no head/foot bars with Futura Air Comfort as a close second.

NB. The RT Velio and R clip Batyline are not suitable. They do not support the client's back sufficiently and tend to bounce up and down during treatment.

15% Discount is available for AoR members directly from LaFuma but shop around as online garden centres often have good offers on.

Therapist Stool

There are two main types; standard stools and saddle stools - this is a personal choice. The stool must have good quality caster wheels and it is important that it is height adjustable up to a minimum of 65cm. NB must be a stool not a chair.

Folding Table

Dunelm folding TV rubberwood table

Cream Fleece Blanket x2

We recommend you have two single blankets rather than a double. Clients tend to get cold during treatments so make sure the blankets are not too thin.

Some students purchase a king size fleece and cut it into 2 or 3 blankets, simply hemming the edges.

Half Moon Memory Foam Bolster

This is to support the client's feet during treatment. The bolster must be memory foam, half moon

Pack of 6 White Cotton Baby Muslins

Pack of White Reusable Baby Wipes

You will need four per treatment. We do not recommend the microfibre cloths as they tend to snag on toenails and dry skin. 10% Discount is available for AoR members directly from Cheeky Wipes but shop around as often cheaper elsewhere.
